

The Battle of Atlanta.
The announcements heretofore published in our telegraphic dispatches as well as the more detailed account which we give in another column, seems to indicate that the great campaign of General Sherman has been nearly ended and his work accomplished. The business assigned the forces under Sherman was to destroy Joe Johnston's army and occupy Atlanta. The latter duty has already been performed and when we get full details of the fight on the 20th inst. we shall see that Johnston's army has been whipped out of its skin. General Johnston was removed because he would not fight, and a fighting man put in his place; but the rebels must now see that Johnston did right to avoid an open combat with the invincible troops under Sherman. Our army has been for eight days seeking something like a fair fight, but has failed until now. Sherman did not want Atlanta so much, important as that place is to the rebels and to us, as he wished to break up the organization of the rebel army in that department. To do this he has been pursuing that army for hundreds of miles, but thanks to General Hood, he need not chase them any longer. It is to be hoped that General Lee will imitate the example of Hood and meet Grant on a fair field.

Atlanta is the capital of Fulton county, Ga., and before the war was a flourishing railroad and business center. Three railroads terminate there, the Georgia railroad connecting Atlanta with Augusta; the Macon and Western road to Macon, and the Western and Atlantic road to Chattanooga Tenn. A few miles south of Atlanta branches the Lagrange railroad, connecting Atlanta with West Point on the Chattahoochee river, at the Alabama line, seventy-two miles distant. By means of these railroads Atlanta was in former times connected with all parts of the United States, and until recently, was the greatest railroad point in the hands of the enemy.

The second of the above named roads, was at last accounts, the only one which remained open to the rebels. As General Roseau with a strong cavalry force has gone in the direction of its line, we may presume that the connections of this route have been attended to. Atlanta was filled with work shops and foundries belonging to the rebel government. Its rolling mill was the most extensive establishment of the kind in the South, and the only one where railroad iron was made. It was mostly employed however, in the construction of gunboat plates. Besides the above named, Atlanta contained pistol, gun carriage, shot and shell factories, and pork packing and oil manufacturing establishments and many work-shops, all busily engaged in supplying the necessities of the rebel authorities. The population of the place was a few months since estimated at 12,000. It is 171 miles from Augusta, on the Savannah river, the seat of the most extensive of the rebel powder mills, 103 miles from Macon, where there is an arsenal. It will be seen, therefore, that Gen. Sherman's army, having successfully passed through the mountains, has emerged into a highly interesting and important section of the Confederacy.

It was into this region of the country, also, that we have been told large numbers of the best and most valuable slaves of the whole South have been taken for safe keeping, and it will not be strange if the raiding parties which Sherman will now send out to scour the surrounding country, will not bring in material that will greatly augment the fighting forces of our army and take from the rebels some of their most efficient laborers.

MAJOR GENERAL JAMES B. McPHERSON, commander of the Army of the Tennessee, who was killed at Atlanta on Friday, was born in Sandusky county, Ohio, in November, 1828. He graduated at West Point, with the first honors, in 1853. After serving in the Engineer Corps in California and Massachusetts, he was appointed Aid to General Halleck, with the rank of Lieutenant Colonel, in November, 1861, and was Chief Engineer of the Army of the Tennessee in the expedition against Forts Henry and Donelson and in the battle of Shiloh. In May, 1862, he was nominated Brigadier General of volunteers, and appointed General Superintendent of Military Railways in the District of West Tennessee in the following June. In October, 1862, he was promoted to be Major General of volunteers.

THE MANCHESTER (England) Guardian confirms the defeat and heavy loss of the English in a fight with the native insurgents in New Zealand. An attack was made upon one of the strongholds of the natives which resulted in the death of Colonel Booth, of the 43d regiment, four of his captains and two lieutenants, and the wounding of two ensigns. The naval brigade also suffered severely, Captain Hamilton, of the Exe was killed, and his senior Lieutenant dangerously wounded. Captain Hay, of the Harrier, was also severely wounded. Notwithstanding their success, the enemy evacuated their position during the following night.

Letter from the Fortieth Regiment.
CAMP BAY, NEAR MEMPHIS, July 24, 1864.
EDITORS GAZETTE:—Thinking a word or two from the Fortieth might be of interest to some of the readers of the GAZETTE, I will pen a few lines which, if you see fit, you are at liberty to publish.

Since reaching this place we have had a comparatively easy time. We are doing picket duty however, which is pretty heavy, the men coming on duty every other day. For some reason the number of sick is very large, about eighty being in the hospital and as many more reported sick in quarters. The sick have the best of care and are mostly convalescent. The camp is situated in a fine shady place with plenty of good water near. The regiment has so far lost but three men.

Since reaching camp the men have had good rations and all they need, but on the boat the "hard tack" sometimes made us think of "Sweet Home" and wish our hundred days were over.

This is a region very richly blessed by nature. Fruit of almost every kind grows with little or no care, and yet the blighting curse of slavery has here as in other parts of the South, produced its baneful effects, instilling into the people a feeling of indolence and careless indifference which everywhere shows itself. Nowhere is to be seen that spirit which characterizes the people of the North. When northern people, bringing with them northern industry, shall seek homes in this fair portion of the great West, then and not till then will this section of the country be what it is capable of being made—one of the richest portions of the Mississippi Valley.

The whites of this vicinity, are with hardly an exception, genuine rebels, and as a class, they are much less intelligent than the blacks who are loyal to the cause every time.

I suppose you have all the particulars of the late sound thrashing which Forrest & Co., have received at the hands of Gen. Smith. The news of this victory produces the best of feeling throughout the army here, and every one expresses unbounded confidence in Gen. Smith.

The boys begin to look forward anxiously to the time when we shall come home again, and some of the boys seem to look at it as the beginning of a second life.

The weather is extremely hot, especially in the middle of the day. Last Monday the thermometer stood at 120 degrees in the shade. The nights are getting quite cool. Last night we felt the cold notwithstanding we had our woolen blankets over us.

I have just heard that the 33d Regiment has got back from the expedition against Forrest, and, also heard that Capt. Swift is wounded. Some of the 8th, have come in and state that they had one man killed and one wounded.

Yours &c.
Co. A, 40th.

P. S.—Some of the companies have received boxes from home, but we seem to be forgotten. Can't our friends find time to send one to Co. A? It would do much to encourage the boys.

A SINGULAR RECOVERY FROM WOUNDS.
During the battle of Gettysburg a private of Company K, twenty fourth Michigan regiment named Keller, was struck by a piece of shell which penetrated his knapsack passing through his clothing and lodging in the shoulder making a hideous wound, three or four inches square. Upon making an examination a surgeon found that Keller had 13 balls and buck shot in his person besides the large piece of shell. He told the comrade of the wounded man to feed him with whiskey and let him die as easy as possible. His friend however took care of him, washed his wounds, got him a clean bed of straw and changed his clothing. At the end of eight days Keller was still alive. He had lost eight balls and a piece of shell, also a piece of the shoulder blade four inches long. The surgeon still thought that he would not recover but he began to gain. He is now as well as ever except a shattered arm and was walking on streets only a day or two since. His recovery is one of the most remarkable on record.—Detroit Tribune.

TREATMENT OF UNION PRISONERS IN GEORGIA.—The Buffalo Express says: We are permitted to copy the following from a recent letter written by an officer in General Sherman's army: "I saw a poor fellow yesterday who had just come into the lines, looking more like a wild beast than a man. He escaped from America, that abode of horrors, nearly a month ago, and after two recaptures at last fell in with our advance. I wish a grand convention of all the Copperheads of the country could be assembled, and have listened to the story of brutality and wrong that I heard from the lips of that poor, wretched, shattered soldier. A stockade in an open field, without shade, and partly a swamp, contains a crowd of nineteen thousand Union soldiers, without a blanket, overcoat or cooking utensil."

THE PEACE COMMISSIONERS.—WHAT THEY OWE.—Tucker, Sanders and Thompson, the pretended rebel Peace Commissioners, are all heavy defaulters to the Union Government. Sanders is behind some $30,000 dollars as Navy Agent under Buchanan at New York. Tucker defrauded the Government out of about $30,000 through the Liverpool Consulate, given him by Buchanan; and Thompson, as Buchanan's Secretary of the Interior, embezzled the great Indian fraud of $800,000. Now that these wretches are nearly dead, had they not better step over and settle?—Pittsburgh Commercial.

WHOLE NUMBER OF SHEEP IN OHIO. 4,800,000, and this year's wool product will be 19,000,000 pounds, worth $15,000,000, Michigan has 4,500,000 sheep, and the estimated wool product is twelve or fifteen million pounds. Throughout the west, the farmers are taking the money they get for their wool, and investing in more sheep, as wool growing is very profitable just now.

"A word in your privateer," as Captain Winslow said to Semmes, when he fired a 11-inch shell into the Alabama.

THE ARMY IN GEORGIA!
DESPERATE FIGHTING AT ATLANTA!
A SPLENDID UNION VICTORY!
(From the Cincinnati Gazette.)
ATLANTA, July 25, 1864.
A glorious victory has been followed by our occupation of this city. A brief resume of events for the past few days will not be uninteresting to your readers.

On July 18th, the last of our forces crossed the river Chattahoochee, and nearly all that day and the next were occupied by the enemy in getting into line. Nothing more serious than skirmishing occurred during the 18th. The weather was very fine for military operations, it being only moderately warm, and refreshing showers falling almost every day. For the first four miles on the southeast side of the Chattahoochee, the country was exceedingly rough and broken, consisting of hills, ridges and ravines, covered with oaks and pines, the whole resembling the Alleghena Mountains.

Until the evening of the 19th, our advance was resisted principally by dismounted cavalry living from behind logs, rocks and trees. By the morning of the 19th we had reached the north bank of Peach Tree creek—a considerable stream running north of Atlanta and westward into the Chattahoochee. The rebels were posted all along the south bank of this stream, and became exceedingly sensitive to our further advance. Parts of Schofield's and Howard's corps crossed the creek, however, on the 19th, and established themselves on the south side. Meantime our left wing, composed of Army of the Tennessee troops, which first crossed the Chattahoochee, had swung around until they reached the Augusta railroad, two miles west of Stone Mountain, in conjunction with General's cavalry division. They drove away the rebels who were on his road, and tore up several miles of track. Rousseau had seriously interfered with communication along the Mobile railroad, if indeed he had not interrupted it altogether. Only the Macon road was left open to the rebels, and their situation began to grow desperate. On the 17th of July, Joe Johnston was relieved of his command of the rebel army, and Hood appointed to succeed him. As the rebel papers next morning made it evident that Hood was put in command on account of his desperate fighting qualities, we all began to look anxiously for a battle on the afternoon. On the 19th, portions of Palmer's corps crossed Peach Tree creek. Dilworth's, formerly Dan, McCook's brigade of Davis' division, which, with the exception of Morgan's brigade and some skirmishers, was on the extreme right of our line, was met with the rebels' right. As it advanced toward a high ridge held by rebels, one regiment, the 52d Ohio, being somewhat ahead of the others, was so furiously assailed that it was compelled to give way, and its commanding officer, Lieut. Col. Chancy, was captured. The integrity of the line, however, was speedily restored, and the brigade finally established south of the creek. Col. Mitchell's brigade was hurried down to the support of Col. Dilworth, and also crossed the creek. Our loss in this affair was a little short of two hundred and fifty men.

On the morning of the 20th, Gen. Hooker's corps crossed the creek to the left of Palmer's, and took position in some low ground along the stream, without fortifying.

Still further to the left, Newton's division of Howard's corps had crossed, and moved out of the bottom and to higher ground—indeed, upon a portion of the same ridge before spoken of as extending all along the south side of the creek, and occupied by the rebels. Immediately upon our advancing to this position, Gen. Newton's men commenced to fortify. They were still engaged in this work, when, about half past three in the afternoon, they were assailed with desperate energy by Bates' and Walker's divisions of Hardee's corps. The rebels came up in some places in two lines, and some in three, and in spite of the most fearful losses, advanced repeatedly to within two or three rods of our lines. Kimball's brigade was on the right of the division, and for a moment seemed to falter, but fresh troops were hurried up to form on Kimball's right, along Blake's front, to Bradley's extreme left. The entire division stood as firm as a rock. The storm which had struck Newton so fiercely, rolled over to the left of Hooker's corps. Gen. Ward's division held the left of the corps; Geary the centre, and Williams the right. The advance of the rebel skirmishers toward Hooker's lines indicated their intention to attack; and his troops, in anticipation of the same, were speedily brought forward from the low ground along the creek to higher ground. In front of this high ground they grew in line with Newton's division on the left, and Johnson's division of Palmer's corps on the right. Just as they had reached the crest of the ridge, with a considerable stretch of open ground in front, they were met by the rebel battalions, composed of Stewart's and parts of Hood's old corps, also advancing lustily three lines deep from the woods beyond the open ground. For the first time in the campaign, a fight took place with neither party behind works.

Almost the whole of Hooker's corps was struck simultaneously, although as the wave of battle rolled from left to right, Ward's division was engaged a minute or two sooner than the others. Face to face the combatants stood, firing deadly volleys into each other's bosoms. At times the lines were not more than fifteen feet apart. On Col. Harrison's front, a hand to hand conflict actually took place, in which officers as well as men were engaged. On Col. Colburn's center, the lines met each other so furiously that they passed one beyond the other, and each engaged front to rear. From Colonel Wood's extreme left to Harrison's right, Ward's whole division, except two regiments, was in the front line, and furiously engaged. Geary was in the next line forward, and Williams simultaneously with Geary. If the left of Geary wavered for a moment under the first rude shock, it was only to illustrate its discipline and excellence, for instantly it rallied, reformed its line, and fought with redoubled vigor.

Gen. Williams' division also gloriously distinguished itself. Knipe's brigade, composed exclusively of Eastern troops, contended in patriotic and glorious rivalry with Colonel Robinson's, which are nearly all Western; while Rogers' made up from both sections, did its duty well.

The gallant Colonel McGroarty, of the 61st Ohio received one more in addition to his numerous wounds, and will probably lose an arm.

From Williams' division the attack extended to the left of Johnson's division, of Palmer's corps. Colonel Anson G. McCook was posted there in command of General Carlin's brigade. One of his regiments gave way temporarily, but his skillful dispositions enabled him to rally it almost immediately, and the entire brigade covered both itself and its leader with imperishable honor. Along such portions of our line as I have mentioned, had been massed for this attack at least one-half the rebel army. By nightfall this entire host was entirely dislodged. It had failed to break our lines at a single point, and retired in disorder, leaving its dead by hundreds on the field. This ended this sanguinary conflict. No more brilliant victory has crowned the Union arms since the beginning of the war. Gen. Hooker has earned anew the gratitude of his nation. Palmer, Newton, Ward, Williams, Geary, and their subordinates, and soldiers, cannot be too highly praised. Gen. Johnson was as faithful here as everywhere else.

Our loss will amount to two thousand men, principally on Hooker's front, because his troops fought in an open field. The rebel losses in killed, wounded and prisoners, will reach six thousand, of whom fully one thousand were killed outright. Three rebel brigadier generals were killed—Stephens, Weatherstone and Long. On Baird's and Davis' front heavy skirmishing took place during the day. On the left wing McPherson drove the enemy several miles, Blair operating on the extreme left, Logan next, and Dodge next, partly in line and partly in reserve. Blair's corps advanced a mile and a half south of the Augusta railroad. General Greshien, who commanded his right division, was grievously wounded. Altogether, the operations on the left were highly successful. On the morning of the 21st, Johnson's and Baird's divisions, of Palmer's corps, were moved forward, and after a brisk contest, in which we lost perhaps one hundred men, the rebels were driven from the ridge in front, the whole of which was now in our possession.

By the morning of the 22d, the rebels had withdrawn entirely from Palmer's and Hooker's front, and at two A. M. part of our army entered Atlanta.

We may have more fighting yet for the full possession of the city, but consider that for the present the campaign is substantially closed.

Health of Grant's Army.
The position now occupied by the Army of the Potomac is pre-eminently favorable to the health of the soldiers during the sickly season of the year. They are not in the Chickahominy swamps, where the malarial fever more than McClellan, than all the battles of Grant's present campaign have taken from Grant, in the contrary. The camping and vicinity is healthy, and the time out of mind so healthy, that the rebel authorities are in the way, located their hospitals at that point.

Next to the Valley of Virginia, where Lynchburg and Stanton are, the land between the Appomattox and the Blackwater rivers, about Sandy Point, is the healthiest in the State. In the county of Prince George, where the bulk of our army is now encamped, we find nothing but high rolling ground, mostly under cultivation, and consequently quite open. Malarious fevers, or epidemic fevers are seldom met with there; the prevailing complaints being those arising from a disordered liver—probably the most controllable of all diseases as a class.

"Gen. Grant," continues the Philadelphia Telegraph, "has contracted his lines recently, not because he fears the rebels, the malarial, or the absolute want of water, but for a reason best known to himself, and one which will be considered good by the rebels a month hence. He has written to all this in quiet the fears of the credulous in such matters, and we wish to place it on record now that it was another General who held the Army of the Potomac in the swamps. Gen. Grant never went where they were, and we think he never will. He has always been a stickler about the axiom that the losses in action are small compared to those which arise from the diseases of the camp in bad climates and sickly regions. The Army of the Potomac has never been in better condition than it is now, either in health, morale, discipline, food, confidence, numbers or determination. Gen. Grant proudly presents mortality lists after actions, but his losses from camp sickness are very small, indeed. 'He fights his men hard,' says Gen. Ingalls, 'but he takes good care of them.'

GET ENOUGH SLEEP.—We have often heard young men remark that four or five hours sleep was enough for them, and all that the human system required. The habit of going without sufficient sleep is very injurious. Thousands, no doubt, permanently injure their health in this way. We live in a fast age when everybody seems to be trying to prevent the order of nature. It takes will persist in turning day into night, it is not to be wondered at that few last out the allotted term of life. No matter what a man's occupation, physical or mental, or like Othello's "gone," and living in idleness, the constitution cannot stand it without a sufficiency of regular and refreshing sleep. John Hunter, the great surgeon, died suddenly of spasmodic affection of the heart, a disease greatly encouraged by want of sleep. In a volume just published by a medical man, there is one great lesson that may be learned by hard students and literary men, and that is, that Hunter killed himself by too little sleep. "Four hours' rest at night and one after dinner cannot be deemed sufficient to recruit the exhausted powers of body and mind." Certainly not, and the consequence was that Hunter died early. If men will insist on cheating sleep, he "twice after death" will avenge the insult.—Home Journal.

IDEAL GIRLS.—The number of idle, and useless girls in all our large cities seems to be steadily increasing. They lounge or sleep through their mornings, parade the streets during the afternoon, and assemble in frivolous companies of their own and the other sex to pass away their evenings. What a store of unhappiness for themselves and others are they, laying up for the coming time, when real duties and high responsibilities shall be thoughtlessly assumed! They are skilled in no domestic duty—many, they despise them; have no habit of industry nor taste for the useful. What will they be as wives and mothers? Alas for the husbands and children, and alas for themselves. Who can wonder if domestic unhappiness or domestic ruin follows. It is one of the world's oldest maxims that idleness is the mother of all evil and wretchedness. How sadly strange it is that so many parents—mothers especially—forget this, and bring up their children in dainty idleness. They are but sowing the wind to reap the whirlwind.

PHOTOGRAPHIC CURIOSITY.—Mr. Silas A. Holmes, the photographer of No. 599 Broadway, has published a portrait of President Lincoln which is likely to prove acceptable to all parties. At first glance it appears to be a photograph of "Old Abe," taken when he had the small-pox a few months ago; but on a closer inspection, the seeming postures are found to be minute photographic likenesses of distinguished generals, statesmen, politicians, literary men, actors, actresses, &c. The likenesses, which are scattered all over the physiognomy of Old Abe, number four hundred and upwards, and comprise men of all parties and professions, and are so exceedingly well executed as to be at once recognized.

Though there are many good looking men and women among the likenesses, yet taken together, they constitute as ugly a picture of Old Abe as any of the others that have been published.—N. Y. Com. Adv.

WYNKOOP'S ICELAND PECTORAL.
Diseases of the Throat, Chest, and Pulmonary Organs are ever present, lung diseases, however. The properties of a medicine to alleviate, cure, and uphold these complaints, must be expectorant, anodyne and invigorating, lessening the mucus of the throat, and imparting tone to the entire system. No discovery in medical science ever mastered this class of diseases like Dr. Wynkoop's Iceland Pectoral. It is used with the most astonishing results in all cases of Bronchitis, Influenza, Whooping Cough, Diphtheria or Putrid Sore Throat, Asthma, Croup, Congestive Cough, Nervous Irritability, &c.

The Rev. J. J. POTTER certifies—"that I have used Dr. Wynkoop's Pectoral for several years myself and in my family, for severe pulmonary complaints, and have recommended it to many others, and have never seen its equal." Rev. J. J. POTTER, Brooklyn, N. Y.

Hundreds and thousands of important testimonials could be produced, showing its remarkable cures and that it never fails.

It is composed of pure Iceland Moss, Balm of Gilead, Peruvian Balsam, Eucalyptus, Camphor, Burdock, and other invaluable expectorant and tonic ingredients. It is harmless, prompt, and lasting. Coughs and colds cannot afford to neglect a trial. Every family should have it. It is a valuable for Croup, all descriptions, recommendations and directions accompany each bottle.

Heinrich's Inimitable Coloring not only restores hair to its natural color by an easy process, but gives the hair a luxuriant beauty, promotes its growth, prevents its falling off, eradicates dandruff, and imparts health and pleasantness to the head. It has stood the test of time, being the original hair coloring, and is constantly increasing in favor. Used by both gentlemen and ladies. It is sold by all respectable dealers, or can be procured by them of the commercial agents, D. S. BARNES & CO., 202 Broadway, New York. Two sizes, 50 cents and $1. aug22dewly

WYNKOOP'S ICELAND PECTORAL.
Diseases of the Throat, Chest, and Pulmonary Organs are ever present, lung diseases, however. The properties of a medicine to alleviate, cure, and uphold these complaints, must be expectorant, anodyne and invigorating, lessening the mucus of the throat, and imparting tone to the entire system. No discovery in medical science ever mastered this class of diseases like Dr. Wynkoop's Iceland Pectoral. It is used with the most astonishing results in all cases of Bronchitis, Influenza, Whooping Cough, Diphtheria or Putrid Sore Throat, Asthma, Croup, Congestive Cough, Nervous Irritability, &c.

The Rev. J. J. POTTER certifies—"that I have used Dr. Wynkoop's Pectoral for several years myself and in my family, for severe pulmonary complaints, and have recommended it to many others, and have never seen its equal." Rev. J. J. POTTER, Brooklyn, N. Y.

Hundreds and thousands of important testimonials could be produced, showing its remarkable cures and that it never fails.

It is composed of pure Iceland Moss, Balm of Gilead, Peruvian Balsam, Eucalyptus, Camphor, Burdock, and other invaluable expectorant and tonic ingredients. It is harmless, prompt, and lasting. Coughs and colds cannot afford to neglect a trial. Every family should have it. It is a valuable for Croup, all descriptions, recommendations and directions accompany each bottle.

Said by all the principal Druggists.

Prepared by Dr. B. H. WYNKOOP, and sold by D. S. Barnes & Co., New York. aug22dewly

We have taken the agency of the above named Insurance Company for Rock county, and intend either personally or by substitutes to canvass the whole county soliciting business in its behalf. It is a stock company, and among the best and most reliable institutions in New York. Dividing 75 per cent of its net profits among its participating policy holders, makes it one of the most desirable companies in which to insure. Risks taken on warehouses, buildings, and all household property at the customary rates.

[Translated from the French.]

After having played on the Piano of Messrs. Knabe & Co., it is impossible not to bear testimony to their qualities, which have afforded for them the eminent reputation which they enjoy. The Pianos of their manufacture, on which I have played, are exceedingly remarkable for their qualities. The bass is powerful without harshness, and the upper notes sweet, clear and harmoniously mellow, (lyric), and I do not hesitate to express in regard to these instruments my is not superior to the best manufactured in Europe or of this country by the most celebrated makers.

HIGH FARMING AND CLEAN CULTURE.
The farmers who make money in this part of the country by the cultivation of the soil, are those who understand and appreciate the force and meaning of the two words at the head of this article. They are those whose native common sense enables them to comprehend the difficulty of making "an empty bag stand upright," and who thus save themselves at the outset from all the disappointment and mortification incident to such attempts.

There are good farms all over Massachusetts and elsewhere, whose proprietors are steady, industrious, pains taking men, upon which, from year to year it is difficult to produce any more than a bare subsistence. Could such farmers be persuaded to adopt new and improved modes of culture, such as has been proved the best by the experience of hundreds and thousands, both in this country and in Europe, they would be able to add to the value of their farms, and increase the comforts of their families, and even succeeding harvest, and lay up a little money every year to provide against any pressing emergency in the future.

Forty bushels of corn to the acre, and a ton of hay, is the ambition of far too many whose lands are capable of a production of twice the quantity, just because they will follow in the old routine of their fathers. In the first place they plow twice the land they can fertilize with the manures made upon the farm; they will not buy a dollar's worth of home dust, or superphosphate, or guano, for fear they shall never see the money it costs them come back to them in an increase of production, and they thus subject themselves to the trouble, cost and inconvenience of double the labor, in plowing, tending and harvesting, which their more enterprising neighbors perform in accomplishing the same results.

What is required to accomplish the needed reform in the modes of management upon New England farms, is more faith in the land. The cultivator must come to a realizing sense that profit, which is the sum and substance of success, comes not so much from the careless cultivation of a large number of acres, as from the thorough cultivation of a few. And in that word "thorough" is included everything which relates to managing, pulverizing and cleaning the land. There are what are called "small farmers," cultivating from eight to ten acres of land whose annual returns in cash would excite the envy of many who cultivate our largest farms; and yet they accomplish these results under greater disadvantages than the large farmers who achieve little in comparison. They do not hesitate sometimes to bestow upon the land in a single year, manure to the full value of the land itself, and they seldom fail of their reward in the shape of immense crops; while the old fashioned cultivators are toiling over a vast surface to gather the scanty products of the old system.

In a season like the present, when farm labor is so dear and difficult to be obtained, the advantages of a thorough cultivation of less land over the usual method, by a careless husbandry of a large number of acres, will be most apparent; and there are few who will make the trial of doubling their crops in the manner we suggest who will ever desire to return to the "good old ways" of their fathers.

But high manuring of less land, and thorough pulverization of the soil, are not alone the means of adding to the farmer's gains. He must not neglect that other prime essential to good farming, a thorough eradication of the weeds. The richer the land the more rapid will be their growth, and they should never be permitted to obtain the mastery. Better abandon every acre, even after the crop is planted, which the farmer finds that he cannot keep thoroughly clean, and confine his efforts to the few that he can keep so clean, as to struggle with the weeds through an unfeeling existence, only to result in a meager harvest and a re-seeding of the land with weeds for future years. The profits of farming are often discussed in public and in private, in the newspapers and in social circles, and opinions are very diverse as to the comparative advantages or disadvantages of the calling, as compared with other pursuits in life. But the discussion of the question always turns upon the merits of the two systems of agriculture viz., that while the largest farms in good localities, half cultivated, in the shiftless, slovenly manner which too often prevails, barely afford a competence to their owners; it is difficult to find one having faith in the land enough to manure it liberally, till thoroughly, and keep all the weeds from his rows and headlands whose means do not increase from year to year, with a regularity and certainty which the same amount of capital and labor invested in other pursuits rarely surpasses.—Mass. Ploughman.

Don't pay Twelve Shillings for a Hat

at some of the small concerns round town, when you can purchase the same at our store for one dollar.

Don't pay $4 for a Linen Coat.

when you can get the same quality at M. C. Smith & Co.'s for $2.

Don't pay from $20 to $25 for a Black Dress Coat.

when you can purchase precisely the same quality at M. C. Smith & Co.'s for from $12 to $18.

Don't pay from $25 to $30 for a Suit of Clothes.

when you can purchase the same, only a little better, at M. C. Smith & Co., at from $20 to $25.

Don't go and pay $10 for a Trunk.

when you can buy the same at our store for $6. Now, Farmers of Rock County, but the real truth, and after you have looked into every concern in town,

THIS IS NOW BLOWING.

GIVE US A CALL!

We will convince you that the above are facts. We shall always cheerfully exhibit our goods and any one favoring us with a call may feel assured that though he might fail to purchase he will not be mislead.
